Internal Audit Outsourcing

Managing change and creating opportunity

As a business that's going places, we believe you can and should expect more from Internal Audit and an outsourced approach can help you achieve this. An outsourced team, aligned to your strategy, relevant to the issues you're facing and armed with innovative techniques and technology, is capable of providing the insights, comfort and confidence you need to deliver against your objectives.

Your own function will, almost certainly, have moved on and evolved over the years. So too, has Internal Audit outsourcing. It's time to reconsider whether outsourcing can provide the agility and specialist resources necessary to help you manage change and make the most of the opportunities presented.

What's on your mind?

Audit function help me meet the growing demands of my stakeholders in an expanding risk landscape? Tapping into experience and insights from the wider market will help you respond to calls for increased risk management and transparency.

How do I best evaluate outsourcing to understand if it's cost effective and can add value to my organisation? If this is your first foray into outsourcing, you may require some support and advice as you explore this new area.

How do I retain control with an Outsourced Internal Audit function? Outsourcing inevitably requires the relinquishing of some control but how much is too much?

How do I get the right cultural fit? You want to ensure that the outsourced provider will be sympathetic to and compatible with your organisation's style and ways of working.

How quickly can I transition to an outsourced model? You'll want to avoid having a period where you have no assurance support. The right outsourced partner should be able to hit the ground running and offer a range of options to assimilate knowledge transfer.

How responsive will my Outsourcer be? Will they really be there when I need them? It's important to feel confident in your Outsourcer's ability to respond immediately to any crisis that happens.

How can an Outsourced Internal Audit function protect me from unwelcome surprises? If you have had unexpected controls failings you will want an outsource partner who will focus on your priorities and find the right skills to ensure this does not happen again.

“Your business is unique and so the assurance you need will also be unique. Outsourcing is an important option to consider when determining what works best for your particular circumstances.”

Our point of view

Focus on what matters – don't overplay the need for your Outsourcer to get up to speed with your business at the cost of embracing the power of an external perspective. Their insights can be a catalyst for encouraging fresh thinking on current and emerging risks in your organisation.

Board level credibility – it's not always easy as an outsider to gain the confidence of the board but your outsourced Chief Internal Auditor (CIA) is likely to have done this many times before. Make sure you give your outsourced CIA the opportunity to do this early.

Trust – you need to trust in your Outsourcers competence to deliver an Internal Audit function, their experience in having done this before and their values which are aligned to your best interests. You need to make sure all three elements of trust are considered in making your decision.

More for less –outsourcing is often assumed to be a more expensive option. Done correctly, it can offer an efficient and cost-effective solution that may even result in cost savings e.g. reduction in training costs, technology costs whilst also applying a flexible resource model where you only pay for the time spent auditing.

Telling you how it is– whilst your outsourced CIA will be immersed in your business, they will not lose their objectivity and you need to ensure they are constantly encouraged to engage/ challenge as this is one of the most valuable assets they can bring to your business.

When to act

An Internal Audit function is a critical line of defence protecting an organisation from the unthinkable. If any of the following factors apply to your business you should consider an outsourced approach to Internal Audit.

- ✓ When you have a complex and/or global structure which requires Internal Audit to visit different locations, understand different cultures/languages and get to grips with intricacy and complexity quickly.
- ✓ When your business is highly regulated and requires up to date industry or subject knowledge in a rapidly changing environment.
- ✓ When your Internal Audit function is doing its best but struggling to provide the challenge and assurance the business really needs.
- ✓ When you have limited or no assurance at the moment and need an Internal Audit function you can just 'plug and play' to give you assurance and peace of mind over the core foundation of activities of your business and beyond.
- ✓ When you need a CIA with broader market experience, the independence and objectivity to act as a 'critical' friend and the gravitas to deliver difficult and challenging messages to management and the Audit Committee.
- ✓ When you are dissatisfied with the current level of assurance you get over your key business risks.
- ✓ When you have unexpected control failures that make you question the effectiveness of your current Internal Audit function or makes you recognise you may need to establish one.
